Course title: Race in the Netherlands
Course code: SOCI 3003 AMNT
Programs offering course: Business and Culture, Social Sciences and Humanities
Language of instruction: English
U.S. semester credits: 3.00
Contact hours: 45.00
Term: Spring 2021

Course Description

In this course students will trace the socio-political, cultural, and anthropological construction of race and racialization in the Netherlands from the country's colonial history until the present day. Reflecting the increasingly charged articulations of race, racism, and race-based grievances in the Netherlands, students will study a wide range of issues, from the lingering legacy of colonialism and decolonization (and the attendant [re]construction of racialized thinking), to reading "whiteness" and "blackness" in the Netherlands, and the role of race in the rise of ethno-nationalism and anti-immigration sentiment.

By adopting an interdisciplinary approach to these issues, students will learn how the history and contemporary lived reality of race (relations) in the Netherlands can only be understood by accessing and closely examining -- from a variety of angles -- the deep cultural archive of the Netherlands and its people. By the end of the course, students will have a deeper understanding of how a country that projects (and subscribes to) an image of itself as an enlightened, post-racial utopia is instead characterized by a deep denial of its racist past and a resulting racialized/racist thinking that continues to inflict every dimension of contemporary life in the Netherlands.

Learning Objectives

By completing this course, students will:

- Gain an in-depth understanding of the history of race as a concept and a lived reality, particularly in the Netherlands;
- Be able to discriminate between dominant discourses on race and address and evaluate key issues and debates on race from an interdisciplinary perspective, as well as from within the Dutch context;
- Be able to connect race matters to the Dutch transnational history of colonialism and current projects and initiatives aimed at promoting diversity and multiculturalism;
- Critically evaluate the complex relationship between race and other axes of difference such as gender, class, ability and sexuality;
- Survey in detail the parameters of whiteness as a concept and lived reality;
- Appreciate how race as a concept is perceived differently in different geographical and historical contexts;
- Be intimately familiar with methods and strategies that tackle race as a concept and a lived reality, as well as counter-tactics and strategies designed to combat racial discrimination.

Course Prerequisites

None

Methods of Instruction

This course runs for seven weeks and will follow both a thematic (first half) and a chronological (second half) set up, starting with key concepts and themes followed by the dynamics of race from the colonial era of the Dutch in the 17th century up to 21st century, including activism, knowledge production and other aspects of Black Dutch representation.

While lectures by the instructor will anchor every unit and serve as the basis of class discussions, these will be amply supplemented by guest lectures from experts in the field, as well as guided site visits, which will both cover a theoretical understanding of race, and how this intersects with lived experiences in the field.

Since this class is dedicated to understanding how the representation of race inflects notions of identity, students will be expected to either watch, read or listen -- and take extensive notes on -- a number of films, television shows, books, songs and public debates. Similarly, students should be prepared to be self-reflexive on issues of race, and how it affects their own identity and surroundings.

Assessment and Final Grade

1. Brief after-class assignments 10%
2. Museum Analysis 20%
3. Individual Paper 20%
4. Final group presentation during last class on the group project 15%
5. Creative multimedia project 25%
6. Class Participation 10%

TOTAL 100%

Course Requirements

Brief after-class assignments

We look forward to the active – and informed – contributions of students; you will therefore be expected to come to class prepared and ready to engage with your fellow students on the assigned readings and site visits. A couple of small after-class assignments will be given for you to reflect in a focused manner.

Museum Analysis

In groups of two, using the text of Henrietta Lidchi, we will engage in a representational or discourse analysis of an object or series of objects of your choice, in the Tropenmuseum. You can choose from both the permanent or temporary exhibits in the museum. A handout will be given beforehand in order to do a step by step analysis.

Individual Paper

Students will be asked to write a 1,500-word paper in which students will explore the basic tenets of racism in a Dutch context, responding to the readings and viewings of week one-three, providing an integrated analysis, with a thesis. They should include:

- a title and subtitle;
- an introduction, culminating in a thesis question (or statement);
- some paragraphs that refer to specific issues related to the thesis, including reading materials, and specific arguments made in the assigned reading(s) to support the thesis statement;
- a conclusion, which may include further/future avenues of approach to the question(s) raised.

The paper must take the form of an argumentative research paper, which means that students must go beyond a mere one-to-one summary or application of the theory and the visual/museum materials under consideration and must instead craft and support an original argument about the reading materials offered in week one-three but also using one or two external reading materials.

These papers must be formatted according to MLA guidelines, and must include a list of works cited; if a student is unfamiliar with the MLA annotation method, the instructor will provide the student with an overview of the most important MLA guidelines. In addition to this summary, students are encouraged to consult Purdue University’s Online Writing Lab (or OWL), which offers a comprehensive and easy-to-use overview of the MLA citation method: https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/resource/747/01/.

Final group presentation during last class on the group project

Creative multimedia project

In class presentation of the group research project. The 20-minute presentation includes an explanation of the core concepts and theories used, the central topic of your project, including examples, has concluding remarks and an explanation at how this is demonstrated and/or captured in the multimedia product. The multimedia project (visual essay, podcast, e-zine) strives to be beyond formal, conceptual, and social constraints.

A 5-7 (max 10) minute audio-visual essay which captures elements presented in the course, vis-à-vis race in The Netherlands. Using the theoretical and practical principles you have learned from the assigned readings, site visits, and (guest)lectures. You do not have to be an expert cinematographer! We will employ the ‘do-it-yourself’ filmmaking style inspired by Dziga Vertov in the 1920s and Johan van der Keuken’s short films on Amsterdam as our inspiration. Your task is to experiment with film and video, with original footage to describe what you have seen and done over the semester.
The visual essay can transcend traditional boundaries, is transgressive both structurally and conceptually, and is self-reflective. It also questions the subject positions of the filmmaker and audience as well as the audiovisual medium itself—whether film, video, or digital electronic. -Nora Alter “The Political Im/perceptible in the Essay Film” (1996).

If you prefer or feel that you are better versed in making a podcast (30 minutes) or a e-zine (online magazine) including photos, references and hyperlinks (minimum of 2,500 words), than that is also possible. (details to be discussed in class).

Class Participation

Participation is valued as meaningful contribution in the digital and tangible classroom, utilizing the resources and materials presented to students as part of the course. Meaningful contribution requires students to be prepared in advance of each class session and to have regular attendance. Students must clearly demonstrate they have engaged with the materials as directed, for example, through classroom discussions, online discussion boards, peer-to-peer feedback (after presentations), interaction with guest speakers, and attentiveness on co-curricular and outside-of-classroom activities.

Students who make active connections to the concepts from the reading materials in class discussions, students who actively ask questions, and students who actively reflect on out-of-class experiences in class will receive extra points for participation. Participation points will be deducted when students do not participate in class or have not read the assigned reading materials before coming to class.

Since we will be discussing culturally sensitive issues in class, the classroom must be a safe space in which students are able to express their opinions openly. Discriminatory comments or language of any kind will not be tolerated.

Attendance

Each student is expected to attend all sessions of the course and to participate actively in class discussions. Attendance will be taken every class session by the course instructor. Absences will be penalized according to the CIEE Amsterdam attendance policy outlined below:

1 or 2 absences = complete 1,500 word make-up assignment

3 absences = 10 points deducted from the student’s final grade

4 absences = the student fails the course (F is listed on the transcript)

- If you arrive to class 15+ minutes late, this counts as a ½ absence.
- At all times, you need to inform the instructor – before the start of class – of any absences. Failure to notify the teacher in advance will result in an extra assignment.
- If you are sick (i.e. physically incapable of attending class), you may miss class, but you will have to complete a makeup assignment
- Going on/returning from a trip are not valid excuses for missing or showing up late to a CIEE class
- Note about all assignments: Late assignments will be marked down by 1 point (out of 10) for every day the assignment is late. Assignments that are more than 3 days (72 hours) late will not be accepted.

N.B. Course schedule is subject to change due to study tours, excursions, or local holidays. Final schedules will be included in the final syllabus provided to students on site.

Weekly Schedule

Week 1
Class: General Introduction

In this week we will start up and get to know each other, the course will be introduced and the general topic including key concepts will be covered.

Readings:

Homework: write in 300-500 words your connection to the topic of race, in any way you can (family, studies, work, social life etc).
Week 2
Class: On whiteness and autochtony

What does whiteness mean in a Dutch context? What are the current discussions in the Netherlands on this and what does autochtony entail? In class, we will watch the documentary The Color White by Sunny Bergman (2017)

Readings:

Homework: Watch video with talk by professor Gloria Wekker, followed by panel discussion https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=BXVPISNOHKE Write up three points that stuck out for you: we will discuss this in class in week 2 on Wednesday

Week 3
Class: Race in Dutch Culture, Race in Europe

In this week we will look at several case studies that unveil Dutch race relations and Dutch representations of Blackness and Whiteness, how they are historically rooted and play out in current day situations.

Guest lecture by Janice Deul, lifestyle journalist and fashion activist. On Wednesday we will watch the documentary Painted Black by Tessa Boerman (2008) and we will work on an intersectional reading of one of the case studies.

Readings:

Homework: Get together as research group and start with thinking of issues/topics, share first ideas and thoughts on Wed Sep 19

Write a paper on one of the topics, concepts or themes discussed in weeks 1-3. Hand in via Canvas by Monday in week 4, 8 AM.

Week 4
Class: Colonial History & Race

In this week, we will shift from a thematic to a more chronological approach, and focus on the Dutch empire, its colonial roots and the implications this had for race relations. This week also includes how to do a museum analysis and a visit to the Tropenmuseum.

Readings:

In groups of two or three, write up a museum report and hand it in on Canvas by Monday in week 5, 8AM

Week 5
Class: Movements in 20th and 21st century

What happened in the 20th and 21st centuries, how did race disappear and appear again and why. What racialized categories can we discern? We will watch the documentary The Colonial Hangover by Sunny Bergman (2014) and Nawal Mustafa (PhD student Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam) will give a guest lecture on Islamophobia

Readings:

Hand in an outline of your group research on Canvas by Monday in week 6, 8AM

Week 6
Class: Intersections

On Monday, you will do a Black Heritage Amsterdam Tour, assemble 9.30AM at De Dam, in front of the war monument, tour guide is Jennifer Tosch

On Wednesday, we will have the last lecture on hybridities and intersections

Readings:

Week 7
Class: Presentation week

Student group presentations and wrap up

Course Materials

Readings

All the required readings listed above (along with a complete bibliography) will be posted on Canvas under Files.

Witheaecx, S. & Essed, P. (2017). 'Two steps forwards, one step back' A conversation with Philomena Essed on difference and decolonisation in the academy and beyond. DOI: 10.5117